

Becoming a Wildfowler – Shaun

I started wildfowling at 20 after an unexpected moment — shooting a wigeon in the fog while out pigeon shooting. That experience sparked my interest.

I taught myself through reading old books and learning from experienced friends who had been in the club for decades.

Now I go out twice a week. What I get from wildfowling is simple: peace of mind.